Vertical Thoughts: Morton Feldman and the Visual Arts

Vertical Thoughts features works by many of the 20th-century's most celebrated artists. The exhibition focuses on the work of the influential American composer Morton Feldman and the many leading visual artists with whom he was closely associated. In 1967 Feldman curated an exhibition entitled Six Painters in Houston, Texas, which presented the work of Philip Guston, Franz Kline, Willem de Kooning, Piet Mondrian, Jackson Pollock and Mark Rothko. Vertical Thoughts takes the 1967 exhibition as its starting point and includes a number of works, such as Rothko's The Green Stripe, 1955, shown in the Houston exhibition. The exhibition goes further than Six Painters, however, by showing other paintings by these artists, which display similar qualities, and works by other artists who were equally influential in Feldman's work, including Francesco Clemente, Barnett Newman, Jasper Johns and Robert Rauschenberg, together with music scores, record covers and Oriental rugs, also significant in Feldman's compositions. IMMA is also presenting a programme of related events and concerts of Feldman's music.

Vertical Thoughts is curated by Juan Manuel Bonet, independent curator and former Director of the Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofía, Madrid.

A major publication accompanies the exhibition. (Price €30.00)

Francis Alÿs: Le Temps du Sommeil

Le Temps du Sommeil, comprising a series of 111 small-scale paintings by the Belgian-born artist Francis Alÿs, has been described as a storyboard or archive of Alÿs's highly imaginative oeuvre, much of which takes as its starting point simple actions performed by the artist and documented in photographs, film or by other means such as postcards. These actions, involving strange objects and fruitless exercises, frequently suggest the dreamlike state of the exhibition's title, which could translate as "sleep time". They are also incorporated into the exhibition in the form of accompanying texts, many derived from the artist's postcards.

The exhibition is curated Catherine Lampert, independent curator and former Director of the Whitechapel Art Gallery, London.

A fully-illustrated catalogue, co-published with Charta, Milan, accompanies the exhibition. (Price €29.00)

Carlos Garaicoa

Cuban artist Carlos Garaicoa has been working since the early 1990s using a multidisciplinary approach that includes architecture and urbanism, narrative, history, and politics. Adopting the city of Havana as his laboratory, his works are charged with provocative commentaries on issues such as architecture's ability to alter the course of history, the failure of modernism as a catalyst for social change and the frustration and decay of 20th-century utopias. Garaicoa's exhibition includes new and recent works which demonstrate his varied articulations of architecture such as The Crown Jewels, 2009, in which miniature replicas of real-life torture centers, prisons and intelligence networks are cast in silver; My personal Library Grows-up Together with My Political Principles, 2008, in which books are assembled to form architectural frameworks, and Bend City, 2007, a city constructed entirely from cut paper.

A fully-illustrated catalogue accompanies the exhibition.

Ferran Garcia Sevilla

Spanish painter Ferran Garcia Sevilla is a collector of images. His eclectic pictorial style draws on his worldwide travels, and on comic books, urban graffiti, philosophy and Eastern cultures, resulting in great sensuous open spaces in which everything blends together, both in terms of iconography and ideas. His raw, colourful, primitive canvases are often peppered with caustic, hand-scrawled commentaries on life and politics. These paintings display the use of automatism, playfulness and flat symbols, and figures floating over solid ground. Turning to ancient and non-Western sources, he has long employed religious symbols – the hand, circle, tree, triangle and cross. His aim is to empower and also challenge these charged forms, not to trivialise them. The exhibition comprises 42 paintings, including such major bodies of work as the Deus series, 1981, and works previously shown at Documenta VIII, 1988, alongside new works from the artist's studio.

The exhibition will tour to Museo Patio Herreriano, Valladolid, Spain, in 2010.

A fully-illustrated catalogue accompanies the exhibition.

A limited edition print by the artist is available for sale.

Collecting the New: Recent Acquisitions to the IMMA Collection

Collecting the New presents artworks recently acquired for IMMA's Collection and marks the first occasion that these works have been shown at the Museum as part of that Collection. It concentrates mainly, but not exclusively, on painting, and features works which have, for the most part, been acquired since 2005. Twenty-six Irish and international artists are represented, including Amanda Coogan, Patrick Hall, Stefan Kürten, Catherine Lee, Janet Mullarney, Makiko Nakamura, Hughie O'Donoghue, and Susan Tiger. The exhibition reflects the Museum's acquisition policy that the Collection should be firmly rooted in the present, concentrating on acquiring the work of living artists, but also accepting donations and loans of more historical art objects with a particular emphasis on work from the 1940s onwards.

Altered Images

Accessible, interactive and inclusive in ethos, Altered Images aims to stimulate engagement with the visual arts for the general public and particularly for those with disabilities. The idea that a visual art exhibition should be accessible to all is not a new one; most museums and galleries have an access programme that enables people with disabilities to experience artworks. However, selecting an entire exhibition with an emphasis on accessibility in a multi-dimensional way is relatively new in Ireland. The exhibition aims to enhance people's engagement with the works through the tactility of relief models, by listening to the audio and artist's descriptions and by viewing the sign language interpretation by Amanda Coogan. The exhibition includes work from the Collections of South Tipperary County Council, Mayo County Council and IMMA by artists Thomas Brezing, David Creedon, Alice Maher, Caroline McCarthy and Abigail O'Brien, with especially commissioned works by Amanda Coogan and Daphne Wright. Snails, After Alice Maher, a new live performance by Amanda Coogan will be premiered for the opening of Altered Images. This new performance from Coogan will be made in response to Maher's work.

A large-print catalogue accompanies the exhibition. An audio CD and Braille documentation of the catalogue are available on request.

A seminar, Altered Images: Modes of Practice will be held at IMMA on 18 June.

IMMA's Education and Community programmes aim to create access to the visual arts by developing audiences through a broad range of programmes and projects.

During 2010 the ARP at IMMA is going to be reviewing and changing its application and programming structure and in the near future IMMA will confirm just one new application deadline yearly to the ARP.
